ART SHOW

This year's art show has a larger area than ever before. The auction area is surrounded by the art show itself, and there is twice as much hanging space than we had last year so you can admire the work more easily.

We will have two auctions again, Saturday evening at 11 PM and Sunday at Noon. It will require three bids on artwork to go to auction, except for award winners which will be presented at auction anyway. Check at the Art Show for more bidding instructions.

There will be our standard art award categories (with cash prizes): general SF, 3D, humor, astronomical, and fantasy, plus a grand prize. These will be awarded by a panel of judges. Everyone in attendance is asked to vote on the Most Popular award.

The art show and auction times are:

Friday	12 Noon - 5 PM (check-in and set-up only)
	5 PM - 8 PM
Saturday	10 AM - 8 PM
	11 PM - 1 AM (auction)
Sunday	10 AM - 11:30 AM
	12 Noon - 2 PM (auction)

John Varley

BY JOHN BARTELT

I first encountered John Herbert Varley (Herb to his friends, John to his book covers) in his first published story, "Picnic on Seaside" in the August, 1974 F&SF. The story was difficult to forget, but the author's name did slip my mind. I rediscovered him in 1977, while reading the Hugo nominees. He had a couple of stories up that year for Best Novelette ("Gotta Sing, Gotta Dance" and "The Phantom of Kansas", he lost to Asimov), and had already distinguished himself as being the first person ever to come in second for the John W. Campbell Award twice. He had two more stories nominated for Hugos in 1978 before winning both a Hugo and a Nebula for "The Persistence of Vision" in 1979. Since then, he's had other works nominated for Hugos and Nebulas, including his novels TITAN and WIZARD.

What about John Varley the man? Well, he was born in Texas, and is stereotypically tall. He's in his thirties, and I've heard women describe him as "a hunk." He's also quite soft-spoken. Nowadays he lives in Oregon with his wife and children. When he's not writing, he collects stamps (American) and tropical fish. He has also confessed a weakness for electronic games, but an even greater fondness for old-fashioned pinball. He's left-handed, and we all know about those kind of people.

He's also a feminist. His stories show it, all the time. No, his women aren't always strong, perfect heroines, but then neither are his men. He has created plenty of female protagonists able to cope with whatever life throws at them. And in a John Varley story, life can throw some pretty odd things.

He has said, "I believe that people will all benefit when any group is allowed to break out of the limitations imposed on them at birth." That philosophy is reflected in his amazing Eight Worlds Series (which includes his first novel, THE OPIHUCHI HOTELING); another series involving Anna-Louise Bach, a Police Chief on the Moon (she plays a small role in his recent story "Blue Champagne"); his Titan Trilogy (TITAN, WIZARD, and the not yet released DEMON); plus other intriguing stories. Many of these have been collected in two anthologies, THE PERSISTENCE OF VISION and THE BARRIS MURDER. His other postulate is that one of the main points of science fiction is "to speculate, and realize your speculations will miss the mark by a wide margin. Because the future (beyond just the next few years) is totally imponderable." Varley has speculated, and while his futures may or may not be on the mark, they would be extraordinarily interesting places to live.

CLIFF SIMAK

BY GEORGE "LANI"
LABROWSKI

I doubt that any reader of science fiction is ignorant of the name of Clifford Simak. His stories have been appearing in books and magazines for the past 30 years—that's more than 200 short stories, some 25 novels and 9 collections. And this is just the science fiction; Cliff has written some Westerns, and spent 47 years of his life as a newspaperman. His skill with words has garnered him several awards: Hugo for "The Big Front Yard," "Grotto of the Dancing Deer," and MAY STATION; Nebulas for "Grotto of the Dancing Deer" and the Grand Master of SF; Jupiter Award for A HERITAGE OF STARS; International Fantasy Award for CITY; the Headliner Award for the "MINNEAPOLIS STAR Program on Information on World Affairs," and Best Idea of the Year Educational Award for the "MINNEAPOLIS TRIBUNE Science Reading Series." Oh, yes, and twice Clifford Simak has been the Guest of Honor at the World Science Fiction Convention (1971 and 1981).

But enough of Simak, the writer...what about Cliff, the person? The fan?

Cliff has been reading SF for longer than he has been writing it. He was a member of the original Minneapolis Fantasy Society, back in the late 1930s and early 40s, when Gordy Dickson moved to Minneapolis from Canada. Among the other members of that group were Carl Jacobi and Donald Wandrei. Cliff has been a fan longer than most of us have been alive.

When I first met Cliff in the spring of 1976, I was immediately taken by his kind manner. "A gentleman and a gentle man" was the phrase I coined at the time to describe him, and it is still true. Cliff is friendly and open. He is kind and accommodating. Like many of the characters he writes about, Cliff has a respect for all forms of intelligence, from dogs to humans to robots to aliens.

You too will find him a Gentleman and a Gentle Man, and wish him a happy 53rd wedding anniversary. He and his wife Kay will have been married 53 years this Tuesday (April 13th).

Spider Robinson

BY jerry stearns

I went to the airport to pick up Barry Smetroff. He arrived for Minicon with three friends - David Emerson, Asenath Hammond, and Spider Robinson - none of whom I had heard before. By Sunday all I really knew of Spider was that he is a good musician, and a lot of fun.

A couple of years later he came back to a Minicon as Fan Guest of Honor. By then he had published a lot of stories, and a novel or two. There he showed his talent as a speaker (see TIME TRAVELERS STRICTLY CASH). To date he has published several story collections, and edited another. He's written book reviews (see DESTINIES), and songs (see ANTIMONY), and in praise of Robert Heinlein and Edgar Pangborn (two of my personal favorites, too). But still, I can read his works anytime. When I see him at a Con I hope for a chance to make some music with him.

Spider says that he wrote about what he knew about - drinking - and subsequently sold the first of the Callahan's Place stories, "The Guy With the Eyes." In later Callahanedotes he still writes about what he knows about - caring. He believes that humans will actually get their shit together one day, and things will begin to make sense at last. And in the stories he writes, and the music he plays, and the happy look of life on his face - by Jake - he can convince you of it too. "When you share joy there's more of it." So this weekend, share a little music with Spider Robinson, and go home with a lot of joy.

Q: HOW MANY GOFERS DOES IT TAKE TO SCREW IN A LIGHT BULB? *

Visit our Recruiting Station for the answer to this and other questions of Galactic Importance. Join the Gofers Corps and see the Con! Badgers and Life Guards needed!

* Actually, Regulation 1973.17 of the guidebook "Laws Pertaining to the Care and Maintenance of Emfortis" (a.k.a. Jane's Guide to Gofers) states that screwing in lightbulbs is specifically excluded from gofers' contracts.

SO THEN, WELCOME TO SAINT PAUL...

BY DAVID STEVER

Whether you're here from South Minneapolis or Evanston, Illinois, this is likely the first time you've ever spent any time in Saint Paul, so let me tell you about it.

Pigs Eye Parrant (he was Canadian, oh) wasn't very well liked by the Garrison at Fort Snelling, so when he was thrown out, he walked down river and started a little village here that was named after him. An early Minnesota "cabrah" type with no sense of humor changed it to Saint Paul, and the rest is history (and history is bunk, as Henry Ford used to say).

In travelling abroad in Saint Paul, remember that as in travelling to Canada, a passport or visa are not necessary, just carry your birth certificate or valid driver's license.

-example of a 'St. Paul Joke', common in Twin Cities

Starting at the hotel, if the wind changes and the air gets a little, er... 'fetid', shall we say, that's just the Pigs Eye Sewage Treatment Plant downstream (to the left as you face the river) of the city. It's just about the only acknowledgement of our civic founder, so if he raises a stink once in a while, maybe you'll understand.

Across the street facing the River, you might notice a small brick building looking like a subway kiosk to you easterners - that's the top of the county jail. It's built into the river bluffs, and that's the top of perhaps an eight story complex.

If you turn right upon leaving the hotel, the next block is Saint Paul's City Hall - one of the best examples of Art Deco architecture in the nation. Built fifty years ago, the interior is really grand; the lobby is done in black marble, and is back-lit to better show off the sixty-five foot statue of the Indian God of Peace (carved from white Mexican onyx). This still remains the largest onyx carving in the world, and shouldn't be missed. While over there, check out the carved brass doors on the elevators, too.

One more block in that direction (west) along Kellogg Blvd. is the Minnesota Museum of Art, not as well known as Minneapolis' Walker Museum, but hey...

About two blocks north, away from the river (it's tough to count blocks in this area, because Saint Paul is eastern enough to have parallel streets merge, while being midwestern enough to have been done out in Early Grain Silo), you'll stumble across the very Gothic Landmark Center. This used to be the federal office building, but when they moved, the building was saved from the wrecker's ball. The result is a very neat/trendy office and what-ever building, there are regular concerts here, and the architecture is a grand example of ugly-is-beautiful.

On the north side of the building is a strange fountain, if it's turned on in early April. It's a six by six foot area where water trickles down like rain - it's weird and wonderful.

Back at the hotel, if it's cold or you're lazy, the Saint Paul Skyway System (the first such system - Minneapolis copied it from us) will take you four blocks through the heart of the shopping district to our new city park 'under glass' at Tom Square. This is like a greener version of Chicago's Water Tower Place, and it's an official city park, but to the chagrin of the local businessmen, hit with the special assessments to take care of it. It's an interesting place to walk around in - shops, water falls, trees, color, the ubiquitous glass elevators. Here is where you'll find the wrong Radisson Hotel in Saint Paul, the Radisson Plaza.

From here, it's one block to Minnesota Public Radio's HQ (Our Les Garrison Kollor works here), and two blocks to both the Science Museum and the World Theatre (The Prairie Home Companion broadcasts from here).

So there you go - Saint Paul, Minnesota - just thank god you missed the Saint Patrick's Day celebration a few weeks ago; after all, you didn't really want to drink green beer, did you?

GENESIS GENESIS GENESIS

Minicon 14* is proud (puff! puff!) to present a special of showing of Genesis at the Science Museum of Minnesota's Omnitheatre on Saturday April 10th at 5:00PM. The cost of this special show, which includes admission to the Museum, is a mere $5.00 (100 Times Better Than Banquet Food At 1/3rd The Price is our cautious understated sales slogan).

Genesis is an exhilarating flight through billions of years of time, simulating the creation of the universe and the formation of our solar system. You will soar through the stars and over the earth, plunge to the ocean floor, probe volcanoes, rifts and subduction zones. You will witness a planet and a universe in a state of constant change.

Genesis at the Omnitheatre will be an awesome spectacle. The Omnitheatre is a unique experience. You will be surrounded by a floor to floor, tilted domed screen that covers 7500 sq/ft. The world's largest film projector, the Omivox, will use a single fisheye lens to project Genesis onto the screen in front of you, above you, and behind you. And the 5000 watt sound system will ensure brilliant sound.

ONLY $3.00!!!

You can take this flight, and get to tour the Science Museum (where the exhibits don't just stare back at you, nyeh-eh-eh!) for ONLY $3.00!

PS: If you haven't already bought tickets, you can buy them at the Registration desk.

CHILD CARE

There will be a paid babysitter available in the child care suite from 6 PM to 2 AM Friday and Saturday. This service is offered at no additional charge to con members. During the day the room will be staffed by parent volunteers. If you would like babysitting available during the day, please be prepared to donate a little of your time to make this a reality.

Older children who don't really need "babysitting" can drop in at the child care suite whenever it is open if they want some place to relax, socialize, or game. We will have a large variety of fantasy and board games for all ages (3 to adult). Some regular children's gaming sessions, including a dungeon descent, will be scheduled. (Watch for sign-up sheets at the Registration desk.)
