Audio & Video at Corflu Glitter

Las Vegas introduced the Virtual Consuite at Corflu Silver. It was wildly successful, subsequent Corflus repeated it and it has become a tradition.

JoHn Hardin, Don Miller and Peter Sullivan are in charge of all Corflu Glitter audio and video activities.

Here a brief rundown of our audio and video:

The Virtual Consuite. We hope everyone who reads Glitter will be able to come to Las Vegas for Corflu, but we understand that isn't likely, or even possible. The Virtual Consuite permits anyone with an internet connection to interact with fans at Corflu Glitter.

Video Interviews. Corflu Glitter's camera-toters will circulate through the con, taping short video segments. They'll be armed with some intriguing questions so that the segments can be edited into coherent video files for distribution throughout Fandom.

Video of Corflu Events. We will video as much of the program and major events like the Opening Ceremony as conditions permit. We're investigating the cost of providing streaming video and will do as much as we can, finances permitting.

Video and Audio Programming. As previously announced, Don Miller will host an informal program of audio and video of interest to fans on Friday afternoon and is also promising a varied menu of vintage video on Saturday evening for fans who want a little breather from the parties.

Fan Bowl I Still Rolling Along

Frank Lunney has announced the formation of the first four-fan team to compete in next April's Fan Bowl I. The international aggregation, as-yet unnamed, features Frank, Graham Charnock, Pat Charnock and Dan Steffan. They're likely to be a strong combination on the alleys – and they'd be a pretty good quartet for doing a fanzine, too.

Meanwhile, Rob Jackson and Mike Meara have formed what Rob called "the nucleus" of a team. It appears that Rob and Mike will emulate the NBA's Miami Heat and try to attract at least one more high-profile free agent to their roster of pin-pulverizers.

The response to this idea continues very strong. Among those who've declared their intention to battle the pins are Ross Chamberlain, Art Widner, Mike Meara, Rob Jackson, Don Miller, JoHn Hardin and Ken Forman.

You can sign up as an individual or submit a four-fan team. Ideally, each team should include at least one woman.

We'll compensate teams with more than one woman and penalize those that have none to make the team competition fairer. The Official Scorer will add the difference between men's and women's average bowling score to the total of a team with more than one female member and subtract the same amount from the team total from any squad that doesn't have one.

Spreading the Jam

Fandom's musicians are getting ready to strike up the band at Corflu Glitter. Teresa Cochran (pipistrelle@cox.net) will host a music jam on Thursday evening in a suite next to the main consuite.

Tell Tee what instruments you play, what types of music you like and so forth. Given our group's diverse musical tastes, finding common ground will be important.

The moral of this story is that I shouldn't have mocked the typo ghods last issue. They have exacted cruel vengeance in the form of a typo'd email address for Teresa. I've corrected it here.

Time to Say Adieu, But Not Good-bye

See you next week. Keepfanning! — Arnie
