Glitter #10, May 13, 2011, is the newsletter of Corflu Glitter, the 29th edition of what has become the World Trufandom Convention.

Edited by Arnie Katz

Glitter is available by request, though it may arrive unbidden, like an overdue bill notice.

Glitter is also available as a free download at Corflu.org.

Corflu Glitter Sets US Supporting Membership

Corflu Glitter has established a “supporting membership” for North American fans who won’t be coming to Corflu Glitter, but who wish to show their support. The cost of a supporting membership is $10 and entitles the fan to receive the program book.

“We’re hoping to see as many fans as possible come to Corflu Glitter,” says Joyce Katz, chairman, “but we’ve decided to give the stay-at-homes a way to express their enthusiasm for Trufandom’s annual world convention.”

Corflu Glitter Sports Update!

The National Football League and the National Basketball Association may cancel their 2011-2012 season, but it looks like dedicated followers of the Sporting World will not be entirely bereft of entertainment.

Professional football and basketball may prove to be scarce, but enthusiastic response to an item in Glitter #9 virtually guarantees that the finest in fannish bowling will be on display on Sunday afternoon after the banquet.

It’s way too soon for an exact count, but we may well have four or more teams to compete. The British fans have waxed especially enthusiastic about the idea, even if they do keep referring to it as “bolwing.”

If you’d like to be included, just send me an email (crossfire4@cox.net) with “Corflu Bowling” in the subject line. This is not intended to be a “males only” event, so female fans are definitely invited to sign up for the tourney.

So far, fans have not demonstrated anything approaching the same level of enthusiasm for either the softball game or indoor soccer match. It’s not too late to beat the drums for either one. Just send me an email with, respectively, “Corflu Softball” or “Corflu Soccer” in the subject line.

Corflu Glitter and the Apocalypse

Vigilant fans have alerted the Corflu Glitter committee to a potential problem that might affect the convention (and many other, less important things). A religious group has designated May 21, 2011, as the end of the world.

Candidly, we are skeptical about such prophecies. Yet it is not appropriate for us to summarily reject someone’s closely held belief without convincing empirical evidence to the contrary.

Joyce Katz, chairman of Corflu Glitter, promises to use all her powers as High Priestess of Fandom to avert this calamity. Should she fail and our star-begotten origins not exempt us from the consequences of a May 21 apocalypse, we will all meet at the Enchanted Convention. Those who have not bought a membership may have to spend some time at the Netherregional.

The committee was already aware that another segment of the population believes the world will end on December 21, 2012. Since that's after Corflu Glitter, the committee was not overly concerned.

Calling All Video & Audio Mavens

Have you got some classic fannish audio and video? Or maybe you'd like to make a short fannish audio or video piece? Bring them to Corflu Glitter and share them with your friends.

Corflu Glitter will showcase audio and video works by and about Fandom. Don Miller will act as master of ceremony at scheduled sessions on Friday and Sunday and informal evening viewing/listening parties.

With the genial Miller at the controls, fans will have the opportunity to see and hear a varied program of short, fannish audios and videos. We're also endeavoring to get movies with a strong fannish connection and have already secured one

If you have a good audio or video, definitely including fannish song parodies, that you'd like to have played at Corflu Glitter, send me an email to start the ball rolling. Those wishing some technical advice on original productions can get some help from our audio-video experts by writing to me.

No Glitter Next Week

Unless something unexpected happens, there won't be an issue of Glitter next week. We only want to send a progress report when there's progress to report.

Keep fanning! — Arnie
